ONLINE and FACE to FACE
TRAINING PROGRAMS

Millions of children in the UK are vulnerable. Trauma through loss, neglect and abuse will impact on a child's health, wellbeing and ability to engage in learning. Children who have not formed secure attachments are often disruptive and unfocused in school and can underachieve as a result. By exploring adverse child experiences and the impact of trauma on the brain, we can understand the behaviours displayed by young people and how to support them.

AC Education supply online courses and face to face training for all those working with vulnerable children throughout the UK. We offer practical strategies to support traumatised and vulnerable children to achieve their full potential.

Our courses are:

- Written by experts such as YoungMinds, UCL, The Institute of Education and Lisa Cherry
- Easy to access with quizzes to ensure understanding, videos and interactive activities to reflect on learning
- Accredited by the CPD Service
- We work alongside experts such as The Attachment Research Community (ARC), Adoption UK and the Fostering Network

Reducing exclusions: The inclusive school

Our bespoke training allows schools to find alternatives to exclusions and map a way forward with young people who have been impacted by poverty, community, relational and developmental trauma and loss.

This is a whole school approach to include rather than exclude by ensuring staff teams have a greater knowledge and understanding of the excluded cohort, safer classrooms and staff support.

Attachment and Trauma Programme

AC Education have developed a comprehensive whole school training programme to meet the needs of your schools and your budgets. The aim is to change the culture of a school to create an attachment and trauma informed school with a positive learning environment.

We work with trainers who are not only attachment and trauma specialists but are also educators who have extensive classroom experience.
